

New to Omnis, or still learning?

TLOmnis

Whether you are new to Omnis Studio or you are an experienced developer wanting to learn new skills, there are plenty of resources available to help you gain proficiency quickly. Expert Omnis knowledge is available through TigerLogic, the development community, or third party resources. This guide tells you where to find it.

Omnis Webinars

Online seminars and demo sessions are held via the Omnis website several times a week. They are designed for beginners and experienced developers alike, and include topics such as Introduction to Omnis and Developing Applications (Web, Mobile and iOS) with Omnis JavaScript Client. Webinars are free of charge and available in English and German. Click on the Webinars tab in the Developers section of our website.

Technical Notes

A large library of technical notes about a range of topics in Omnis development is available on the Omnis website. Many of the technical notes have been written by our support and technical staff and complement the official product documentation. Notes cover topics such as Omnis JavaScript Client, iOS client and Mac Apps, Object Orientation and Inheritance, GUI and Application Design, Client/Server and SQL Programming, Data Management, and more. Technical Notes can be found in the Developers section of our website.

Technical Newsletter

The Omnis Studio technical newsletter contains in-depth explorations of Omnis Studio features. You can sign up on the website under the News section or read over 10 years' worth of back issues.

Developer Mailing List

Known in the Omnis developer community as "the List", this is an email-based mailing list run by Omnis developers, for Omnis developers. You can get answers to your technical questions and discuss solutions. The Omnis list is available in English, French, German, Italian, and Spanish. Sign up at: www.omnis-dev.com.

Omnis Video Library

Omnis developers and TigerLogic's Omnis engineering team share their knowledge and application building skills. Omnis Studio video presentations offer great information on Omnis Studio, illustrating how to build successful cross-platform applications utilizing the latest features of Omnis. The Omnis Video Library is in the Developers section of our website.

Developer Conferences

The Omnis developer community typically holds a conference once a year in Europe. The conferences are usually held over a week and are a great opportunity to learn about Omnis and share knowledge of the product. For details, go to: www.euomnis.com.

Technical Support

If you are a professional developer and intend to use Omnis Studio as your main business application development tool, we recommend you enroll in the Omnis Developer Partner Program (ODPP). The ODPP provides significant benefits and cost savings over purchasing the Omnis Studio package or technical support outside the program. For more information about the ODPP, contact your local TigerLogic sales representative.

Omnis Training

As one of the most cost-effective ways to learn Omnis, professional training allows you to build your application quickly and easily. Training courses are held in the UK, Germany and other European locations, on all areas of application design including the Omnis Web client, object-oriented programming, and more. For full details see Training Courses in the Developers section on our website.
